“THE HILL WE CLIMB”

Foley Hoag Foundation 2020 Annual Report
This year’s report, entitled “The Hill We Climb,” derives from and is dedicated to upholding the inspirational message of Amanda Gorman’s spoken word poem delivered at the Inauguration of President Joseph Biden and Vice President Kamala Harris. Gorman’s poem describes the “dawn” of a renewed commitment to forge a more just and inclusive society, “not a union that is perfect…but a union with purpose.” Founded on the concepts of social, economic, and racial equality, and celebrating 40 years of philanthropic giving in 2020, the Foley Hoag Foundation remains dedicated to supporting organizations that seek to promote these ideals.

The Foley Hoag Foundation dedicates this year’s Annual Report to its former trustee, Julia E. “Liz” Harris, who passed away in December of 2020. In addition to playing a critical role in advancing racial, economic and gender equality issues at the Foundation’s core, Liz was also a business woman, a patron of the arts, as well as a devoted mother and grandmother.

Born in Chicago in 1948, Liz attended school in Chicago and Pasadena, CA before entering Harvard (Radcliffe) College as one of only four African American women in a class of approximately 400 students. She graduated cum laude from Harvard College in 1970; in 1977, she completed her MBA at the Harvard Business School. Liz founded the Liz Harris Gallery in Boston in 1983, to promote the art of African American artists from across the nation. She later worked at UNC Partners, Inc., in Boston, MA, from 1990 to 2011, eventually serving as Executive Vice President. In addition to her many professional accomplishments, Liz also sat on the boards of many civic and art organizations, including the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, the Massachusetts College of Art and Design, the First Unitarian Church of Chicago, and for many years beginning in 1984, Liz served as a trustee of the Foley Hoag Foundation.

We are so very grateful for Liz’s efforts on behalf of the Foundation; we will remember Liz for her collegiality and her fierce commitment to creating pathways for those without equal access.
Boston's school desegregation case is a seminal chapter in the city's history and part of America's painful interracial narrative. In the decades since Foley Hoag successfully represented the plaintiffs in that action, the firm has committed itself to transforming the wrenching events of the past into a promising future.

Using fees awarded to the firm for its victory in that landmark case, the partners of Foley Hoag established the Foley Hoag Foundation in 1980. Originally focused on improving race relations among youth in Greater Boston, the Foundation's mission today is to support programs addressing inequality in its various forms, including racial, ethnic, and gender disparities in both Greater Boston and metropolitan areas and Washington, D.C., to raise awareness about these issues. In addition, beginning in 2020, the Foundation expanded its geographic reach and for the first time awarded grants in the Greater New York area. The unprecedented events of 2020, i.e., a global pandemic, the horrific murder of George Floyd, the prominence of the Black Lives Matter movement, and the rise in violence against the AAPI community, underscore the Foundation's relevance 40 years after its creation. The Foundation's mission is to award grants to organizations working to improve the social climate by addressing inequality in its many forms and to combat the continued effects of historic discrimination. Supported programs include arts and cultural activities, youth education, development, and leadership programs, college and job readiness training, criminal justice reform, and assistance with advocacy and civic engagement.

In 2020, where so many of the impacts of the pandemic were disparately borne by minorities and communities of color, the Foundation's focus included special grants to combat food insecurity and to promote racial and social justice. A five-member Board of Trustees, including three firm partners, guide the work of the Foundation.

Lawyers and others at Foley Hoag play an active role in the activities of the Foundation, including reviewing grant proposals and recommending grantees to the Foundation’s Trustees. Since 1981, The Foundation has awarded nearly $3 million in grants to more than 400 organizations.

Foundation Trustees:

Mossik Hacobian  Michael B. Keating  James Montgomery  Jeffrey Mullan  Jeanne Pinado
With the assistance of GMA Foundations and Foley Hoag volunteers, the trustees awarded grants totaling $454,500 to dozens of organizations in Boston, New York, and Washington, D.C., the most in the Foundation’s 40-year history.
The Foley Hoag Foundation Speaker Series is committed to inspiring dialogue, community engagement, and civic education and learning about issues related to equity and inclusion among people of diverse backgrounds. It aims to feature and highlight the work of guest speakers who are local thought leaders, scholars, public figures, and community activists. The Speaker Series is an integral part of the Foundation’s mission to combat inequality in all of its forms in Greater Boston, New York City, and metropolitan Washington, D.C., and appreciates the support of the Friends of the Foley Hoag Foundation, Foley Hoag attorneys, and other interested members of the community. With the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic, however, personal and professional circumstances changed, forcing all of us to pivot to virtual platforms, and convert our homes into schools and offices. As a result of some of the challenges created by the pandemic, the Foundation did not hold a Speaker Series event.
In July 2020, the Foundation once again partnered with grantee Apprentice Learning to host its City Summer Internship Interns. Apprentice Learning’s City Summer Internship is a paid career exploration program for Boston girls entering ninth grade that allows them to explore careers in Boston’s economic engine neighborhoods and “learn to earn.” Like many other programs operating during the pandemic, the Foundation’s Summer Event switched to a virtual platform; the virtual program invited this year’s participants to meet in small discussion groups to discuss the current events highlighting systemic racial injustice.
“If you have come here to help me you are wasting your time, but if you have come because your liberation is bound up with mine, then let us work together.”

RACIAL JUSTICE

3PointFoundation, Inc. - to run a virtual summer camp that provides students the opportunity to interrogate the presence and perpetuation of racial inequities and how discrimination and power dynamics foster that inequity, and subsequently work on a project to address community issues that reflect a change in power relations.

365Dad Inc. - for two programs: (1) Solution-Focused Black Film Series and Panel Discussions, which increases dialogue on issues of racial inequalities through film; and (2) Speak Up and Speak Out: Fathers against Inequality Podcast, which educates fathers on podcast production via a paid internship.

All Dorchester Sports and Leadership - for a summer drop-in program at a local park that will provide a safe, supervised space for children in the neighborhood with nowhere else to go.

Art Resource Collaborative for Kids - for the Building Bridges program, which encourages students to become agents of change in their communities through arts education.

Arts Connect International - to create a cultural equity learning community online course, which aims to train leaders that are committed to building racial equity and justice in the arts.

Asian Women for Health, Inc. - for the Mobilize Asians project, which creates forums and virtual events to reflect and respond to the Black Lives Matter Movement following the murder of George Floyd.

Black Economic Justice Institute - to address racial inequality in Boston by conducting a summer civic engagement outreach campaign to increase voter registration, provide voter education, conduct census follow-up, hand out masks, and educate on COVID-19 updates within the communities of Roxbury, Mattapan, Dorchester, Roslindale and East Boston.

The City School - to support a virtual Summer Leadership Program focused on bringing young people from across Boston together to develop leadership skills, take action alongside local organizations, and build community across difference.

City Strings, Inc. - to expand enrollment in Boston-based music program that provides weekly cello lessons and performance opportunities to students of color in Dorchester/Roxbury.

The Commonwealth Seminar - for civic engagement and voter advocacy programming in marginalized communities.

Community Change Inc. - for phase 1 and 2 of its Racial Healing Project.

Community Dispute Settlement Center, Inc. - for the Mediator Diversity Initiative, which would provide 6 scholarships to CDSC's mediation training and practicum to Black and Brown mediators.

Dunamis, Inc. - to support an organization founded by and serving professional artists of color, focused on professional leadership training to advance their artists' careers.

Elevated Thought - to support youth-led art galleries that highlight the work of BIPOC youth and encourage necessary conversations about the intersections of race, queerness, and gender in our community.

The Front Porch Arts Collective - the most recognized Black theatre company in Boston, to subsidize anti-racism consultation provided to Greater Boston arts and culture organizations.

Girls’ LEAP - to expand the Teen Mentor Program, which provides early professional experience and empowers young women of color.

Hawthorne Youth and Community Center - for a skating ramp and computer/Internet access upgrades.

He is Me Institute - to support programming that provides mentoring by undergraduate men of color to middle school boys of color, bringing Black men into classrooms to give Black boys an opportunity to learn and be inspired by Black male teachers.

Higher Ground Boston - to provide stipends for up to 20 parents from the Roxbury, Dorchester, and Mattapan communities to engage in monthly meetings/consultations designed to help them become involved in critical decisions affecting their children's education, particularly decisions related to budgeting.
John P. Holland Community Council - to support “Empowering Kultural EnGagement,” a youth-development and engagement program that will reveal the roots of systemic racism and provide allies with information through inclusive conversations on how to address stereotypes.

Massachusetts Voter Table - to support a consortium of organizations that focus on training local activists to do neighborhood education that increases voter turnout and educates the public about democracy.

Medicine Wheel Productions, Inc. - to fund digital story telling for 40 diverse youth working remotely this summer to advance their own individual story, understand how it fits into a larger social context, and identify what action steps they can take.

Mission Hill Health Movement - to create “What I Want my Doctor to Know” video featuring BIPOC and anti-racism programming.

MusiConnects - to support youth development program that uses chamber music as a vehicle for social change, hoping to make music both culturally and financially available to all.

New Beginnings Reentry Services - to support the placement of 15 women who are being released from incarceration into a transitional living facility opening Fall 2020.

On with Living and Learning - to fund A Place to Live: A Dance of Negotiation, a play focused on homelessness as it relates to injustices suffered by women and girls in communities of color.

OrigiNation Cultural Arts Center - to support the annual production of “Our Story,” a compilation of poetry dance, music, and theatrical sketches that trace the history of African Americans beginning in Africa (pre-slavery) through the Middle Passage, Civil Rights Movement and current affairs.

Powerful Pathways - to implement a citywide community racial dialogues initiative featuring a series of public art/public space activities to facilitate discussions on racial justice across Boston and highlight innovative interventions that disrupt urban and civic challenges.

South Boston En Accion, Inc. - for the Leadership Academy Program, which provides different groups of Latino residents in South Boston with programming and a general support system.

Stages of Freedom - to expand the reach of its “Connected” e-newsletter, which targets Black and African-American communities, providing culturally relevant information on a range of topics, from how to use grocery delivery/pickup services, to managing mental health, to structural racism and the disparate impact of COVID-19.

StageSource - to engage experts to collaborate on a year-long conference for organizations and individuals to improve systemic issues in Boston theatre.

Sustainable Business Network of Massachusetts - to hire a staff member to implement the Cambridge-Somerville Black Business Network, designed to promote and market businesses in the greater Boston area owned by Black and Brown business owners.

Violence in Boston, Inc. - for the Social Impact Center, which will prevent and reduce the impact of violence by addressing immediate and basic needs of disenfranchised Boston residents, such as housing, food, clothing, and public safety and by enabling community members to advocate with elected officials.

Youth Justice and Power Union - to support youth organized and led campaigns to fund youth jobs, defund the police, and reallocate funds into communities of color based on community-led budgeting.

The Foundation allocates its grant resources across multiple fields including arts, education, training and research, cultural activities, and social services. It places an emphasis on collaborative programs and projects that engage people of different backgrounds in a common effort to create equal opportunity.

Preference is given to innovative projects in Greater Boston, New York, and Washington D.C. where a small grant is likely to make a meaningful difference. Through its grantmaking activities, the Foundation is committed to fostering a spirit of mutual respect, understanding, and cooperation among people of diverse backgrounds, for the long-term benefit of all residents of the city. The Foundation hopes that its funding interests and activities will encourage other firms and professional organizations to become more involved in community-based philanthropy.

Guidelines emphasize a preference for:

- Projects that constructively engage people of different races and backgrounds.
- Projects with a geographic focus on the city of Boston, New York or Metropolitan Washington, D.C.
- Organizations with integrated boards and staff leadership, or with active plans to do so.
- Project-related grants, rather than requests for capital expenditures or general operating funds.
- Small or start-up organizations with budgets less than $500,000 where a small grant is likely to have a greater impact.
- Grants for programs that collaborate with other agencies.
- Leveraging support by awarding conditional or challenge grants requiring grantees to raise matching funds.

2020 Food Security and Racial Justice Grants

Given the unprecedented and disproportionate economic impact the pandemic had on minority populations and heightened attention to systemic racism in the wake of the death of George Floyd, the Foundation felt compelled to alter its normal two-cycle grant awards.

- The Foundation awarded $15,000 to organizations in Boston, New York and Washington, D.C. to combat food insecurities.
- In the fall of 2020, the Foundation awarded $134,000 to organizations dedicated to promoting social justice.
- For the first time, and as a direct result of the murder of George Floyd and the elevated attention to and discussion of systemic racism, in the summer of 2020, the Foundation awarded more than $300,000 in grants to dozens of organizations in Boston, New York and Washington aimed at combatting racial injustice.
